BECOMING A DOM · CHAPTER 5

Posting and workflows

Posting decides less than people hope. This chapter covers marking adult media on X, spreading the risk across accounts, a rhythm you can keep, and the pressure tricks to spot as a reader.

ENTRY D5 CATEGORY BECOMING A DOM CHECKED 3 NOVEMBER 2026
READING 10 MIN STEPS 6

EVIDENCE ◆ Verified ◆ Vivian's field notes ◆ Unverified

IN 30 SECONDS

01 Reach depends more on the account and the platform than on how good one post is.

02 X allows labelled adult content from drawn and generated characters too, so mark each post that needs it.

03 Give every account one job, and never let the persona depend on a single account.

04 Keep a rhythm you can hold. One you resent won't last.

05 Some captions and promotions are written to push. Read them as the person they're aimed at.

YOU WILL LEARN

- ✓ Why one post tells you almost nothing about your account.
- ✓ What X actually writes about adult media, and what's only scene folklore.
- ✓ How to split a persona across accounts without making a mess.
- ✓ How to run a launch, a collab or a themed month.
- ✓ Which posts and promotions are built to push a reader, and how to answer them.

A careful post can vanish and a careless one can travel, and nobody can tell you which in advance. What you control is how you mark your work, how you spread the risk and how you keep going without the feed taking over your week.

STEP 01 OF 06

One post tells you almost nothing

Reach depends on the account and the platform more than on the post. In my experience a weaker post from an account the algorithm favours can get many times the views of a careful post from one it ignores. Hours of editing predict nothing: a long intro can flop while a plain picture with one word travels. One post tells you almost nothing, and its first fifteen minutes tell you even less. Look at several posts before you judge an account, and don't take a slow start as a verdict on your talent.

A post that travels says nothing about the person behind it either. Lots of views don't make a persona someone you can trust.

Folklore. The scene repeats a lot of rules about reach. They're listed here as folklore, so you can recognise them and weigh them yourself.

- A brand-new account gets pushed hard at first, so a fresh account is the best place for a launch. Repeated a lot, never measured.
- An account is healthy only if one post has reached a few hundred likes without a label. That comes from one creator's habit, and there's no published figure.
- Posting very regularly and repetitively looks like a bot and hurts reach. Someone's guess, never tested.
- Keep links out of the bio, never tag anyone and post once a day to be favoured. Other creators disagree.
- The picture and the caption together decide about 40 percent of how a post does. A guess with no data behind it.

VIVIAN'S FIELD NOTES

When my reach drops, I check the labels and the settings first, then I look at several posts, then I check whether other creators saw the same drop. If they did, it's the platform. If only I did, it's my account.

◆

STEP 02 OF 06

Marking adult posts on X

X allows adult nudity and sexual behaviour that was produced consensually, as long as it's properly labelled and not prominently displayed, as of 2026-11-03. ◆ The same rule covers animated and AI-generated content, cartoons, hentai and anime included, so a drawn persona gets no exemption. ◆ Adult content isn't allowed in live video, profile pictures, headers, List banners or Community cover photos. ◆ The labels are there so that people under 18 don't run into it. ◆

X gives you two tools, as of 2026-11-03. You can set your account to mark everything it posts as possibly sensitive. ◆ Or you can put a one-time warning on a single photo or video: Nudity, Violence or Sensitive. ◆ X also says it may use automated techniques to detect and label sensitive media, so your own marking isn't the only label a post can get. ◆ If an account keeps mislabelling its media, X may label it for you, and an offending profile or header image can get you a temporary suspension. ◆

Consent is a separate rule. X bans content that sexualizes or exposes an identifiable real adult without explicit consent, and the rule names AI-

generated and manipulated media. ◆ If your persona uses a real person's face or voice, you need that person's agreement.

What X doesn't publish is the part creators worry about: what makes the classifier fire. When I measured it on my own pictures, the triggers were sheer or wet clothing, bodily fluids in a sexual setting and implied arousal, and bare skin alone didn't get a label. ◆ Other creators swear by other triggers, like any visible rear, and that stays folklore until X writes it down. ◆ The classifier is also erratic. A mild image can get labelled, a fresh post can lose its label a few minutes later, and there's nobody to appeal to in the moment. ◆

Marking costs reach. Not marking costs more. A marked post is expected to get pushed less. An unmarked adult post risks reports, and in the scene a single report has locked an account until an appeal was answered. ◆ So plan around reports, and not only around reach. Some creators leave the account-wide setting off and mark only the posts that need it. There's no data on whether either choice changes reach. ◆

Before an adult post goes out

0 OF 5 DONE

- [ ] 01 Decide when you export whether the post needs a warning, and mark it yourself if it does.
- [ ] 02 Keep every character an adult, with nothing child-like in her look or setting, whatever the lore says.
- [ ] 03 Leave out any real person who hasn't consented.
- [ ] 04 Keep adult material out of the avatar, the header and any banner.
- [ ] 05 Label what needs a label. Don't tweak pictures to slip under the classifier.

Tick the lines as you go. Your ticks stay on this page only and clear when you leave it.

STEP 03 OF 06

Spread the risk across accounts

A persona that lives on one account can lose everything at once. Platforms close, freeze and restrict accounts, and a restricted account can lose most of its reach for weeks. The scene calls a search suggestion ban an SSB: the account stops showing up in search suggestions. Many creators keep a backup account ready. A backup account is there so you can carry on when a platform closes your account for a reason that isn't a ban on you. Opening a new account to get round a ban breaks platform terms. ◆

This wiki doesn't explain how to get around a suspension or a restriction. Read the platform rules before you open another account, and see Stay anonymous for the identity side.

X doesn't require a real identity on a profile, so a pseudonymous persona is allowed, as of 2026-11-03. ◆ Its fake-persona rule targets made-up identities used to deceive people, so read it before you decide how you present your persona's biography. ◆

A common set-up gives each account one job. ◆

One account or several

◆	Job	Main risk	Avoid
Main	Reach and the way into the community	Restriction or closure	Putting every launch there first
Archive	Older content and series	Looking abandoned	Treating it as the account that grows
Test	Trying a kind of content before the main account does	Almost no reach at first	Judging a big teaser by it
Send account	Handling sends, kept separate	Getting mixed up with growth work	Growing it in public

Some creators spread a themed evening across accounts, one post an hour for about six hours, and compare how the same kind of content does before they use the main account. Big announcements go where the audience already is, because a new account has almost no audience. ◆

STEP 04 OF 06

A rhythm you can keep

In the scene the usual aim is a post a day. Skipping a day or two is fine as long as the next post comes, and forcing output when you're low gets you nowhere. After a quiet stretch, come back with something striking instead of more noise. Post at the hour that suits your audience's evening, whatever your own clock says. Video is an occasional highlight, because a clip costs far more to make than a still. ◆

VIVIAN'S FIELD NOTES

For me, two days without a post is a lapse. It reminds me to make new images and new text. It's never a reason to post something weak.

◆

Replies are part of the rhythm. A slow answer to a private message costs you a session, and the pile of replies after a post is one of the biggest time costs of running a persona. Views aren't sends, and a few good subs are worth more than a big audience. ◆

Posting is a chore, even for experienced creators, and comparing yourself to the feed makes it worse. Three things help. Read the timeline from a separate account that isn't your findom account. Keep active projects to one or two. Step away from the social accounts for a few days when you're burnt out. ◆

STEP 05 OF 06

Edits, captions and launches

Captions. A caption has to say one clear thing. If it contradicts itself, or needs a paragraph to explain its visual metaphor, a fresh reader rejects it, so show it to someone outside before you post. An image alone is weak without words, and a picture the audience has already seen is weaker still. Captions written by a machine tend to feel flat. Write two or three sentences yourself and let a tool polish them. A promo image with too much text overloads the reader. A clean picture with the name and one call to click reads best. ◆

Files. An export can leak more than the picture. GPS data, provenance records and generation prompts can travel inside a file, and a browser encoder may add a colour profile by itself. The 2DFD editor, made by Vivian, is designed to strip this data, read the file again and refuse the export if anything is left. That's what it's designed to do. It doesn't certify that it always does it. A teaser and a full version can be exported as a pair, the teaser censored for the public feed, with the same loop length. ◆

For a hypno edit, the accessibility guidelines set the limit at three flashes in any one second, unless the flash is below the stated thresholds. ◆ Staying under it doesn't make a loop safe for everyone, so warn first and offer a calm version. The point where the loop restarts counts toward the limit. ◆ See Hypno and edits.

Export check

0 OF 5 DONE

- [ ] 01 Clean the metadata, then read the file again to check.
- [ ] 02 Look at generated pictures for stray text and anatomy glitches.
- [ ] 03 Export the teaser and the full version as a pair.
- [ ] 04 Count the flashes in any loop, including the point where it restarts.
- [ ] 05 Preview it at feed size, after the platform has recompressed it.

Launching a tool. Ship a decent first version and post about it. Say plainly what it does, what it costs and how to stop it. If it flops, post again, because a flop doesn't mean the tool is bad, and public updates like v2 and v3 build interest. Have a promo picture ready. One image is enough for a familiar kind of tool, and an original one deserves a short video or a page. Don't link to a site that isn't ready. ◆ See Techdom for what the tools do.

STEP 06 OF 06

Events, collabs and the pressure to watch for

A themed month needs a written plan, per day and per account, before it starts. ◆

A month-long event plan

1. Weeks before

   Write the theme, the daily text and the image for each day and each account. ◆

2. Launch

   Open on a weekend, and add any link that isn't ready later. ◆

3. Each day

   At least one post per account, at a different hour on each. ◆

4. Each week

   One release or one feature a week, never one a day, because each one needs time to spread. ◆

5. End

   Close it and tell the audience it's over.

A collab can be cheap. Each persona makes a short loop of about ten seconds, and the two are joined into a duo video that both of you post. A reply or a quote from a bigger account can multiply the views of a smaller one, so put the terms of swaps and retweet games in writing. In a collab, you don't use the other dom's private material or lore unless she agrees in writing. ◆ Custom emotes and stickers can brand a server. ◆ Discord doesn't allow sexually explicit content anywhere that can't be age-restricted, such as avatars, bios, banners, emoji and stickers, as of 2026-11-03. ◆

Posting is where readers first meet a persona, and some posts are built to push them. ◆ A sub who knows how these posts are built is harder to push.

Posts and promotions that push, and the counter

WHAT THEY SAY OR DO

01 A caption that enjoys a falling balance, says the choice is already gone and ends with an order to empty the account

THE COUNTER

It's a hook written for the feed to imitate compulsion. It describes the persona and says nothing about you. Close the app, check your limit, and read The spiral if the wording felt true. ◆

WHAT THEY SAY OR DO

02 A leisure scene paid for with the viewers' lunch, fuel or rent money

THE COUNTER

It ties her comfort to your real expenses. It's theatre, and your lunch money is still yours. ◆

WHAT THEY SAY OR DO

03 A launch prize for the first people who send proof of spending

THE COUNTER

It pulls spending into the public feed and rewards the people most likely to overspend. No prize changes your limit. ◆

WHAT THEY SAY OR DO

04 A post that shows a send landing, a balance or a ranking

THE COUNTER

Staged proof exists, and you can't check a post. Treat it as advertising. See Spot a fake dom. ◆

WHAT THEY SAY OR DO

05 A prefilled-post link, especially a shortened one

THE COUNTER

A shortened link hides where it goes. Check the destination and read the text before it goes out under your name. ◆

WHAT THEY SAY OR DO

06 A private message from a persona soon after you liked a post

THE COUNTER

Messaging people who already engage is a standard way to turn views into sends. A message doesn't oblige you to anything, and you can say no. ◆

More pressure designs are in Pressure tactics, both ways.

On the dom side, the same rule works the other way. A sub may offer to be content. Share nothing that could identify him, and only with his real agreement, because humiliation content about a real person can follow him. If you're not sure, don't post it. ◆

TRY IT

Your account lost reach after a week

You posted as usual and the views dropped to a fraction. You don't know why. What do you do first?

A Check the labels and the settings, then look at several posts before deciding

The right answer. Right. A label or a setting is the easiest cause to find, and one week of data isn't much.

B Open a new account tonight and move everything

Not this one. Too early. You haven't found the cause, and a persona on one account is still the problem.

C Post five times a day until it recovers

Not this one. Posting more doesn't fix a label or a restriction.

D Change the character, since she's the problem

Not this one. Nothing shows that the character decides reach.

TRY IT

Check yourself

QUESTION 1 OF 3

A drawn persona posts a sheer, wet-clothing image. What does X's adult content page say about drawn characters?

- ◯ They're exempt
- ◯ The adult content rules apply to animated and AI-generated content too
- ◯ They have to be posted on a separate platform

Answer. The adult content rules apply to animated and AI-generated content too. The rules cover cartoons, hentai, anime and AI-generated content. ◆

QUESTION 2 OF 3

Where must adult material never go on X?

- ◯ Profile pictures, headers, List banners and live video
- ◯ The post text
- ◯ A direct message

Answer. Profile pictures, headers, List banners and live video. X lists live video, profile pictures, headers, List banners and Community cover photos. ◆

QUESTION 3 OF 3

A post claims to show a sub sending the maximum. What is it?

- ◯ Proof
- ◯ Advertising you can't check
- ◯ A reason to send the same

Answer. Advertising you can't check. Staged proof exists, and a screenshot proves nothing about the person behind the persona.

REMEMBER IT

- One post tells you almost nothing. Look at several.
- Mark adult posts yourself, keep adult material out of avatars and banners, and expect the classifier to be erratic.
- Folk rules about reach are folklore until the platform writes them down.
- Give every account one job, and never let the persona live on one account.
- Captions that imitate compulsion and promotions that reward proof of spending are built to push. Close the app and check your limit.

SOURCES AND EVIDENCE

Check it

Every claim with its evidence level and its sources.

EVIDENCE LEVELS

◆ Verified	Checked against the original source.
◆ Reported	Stated by a serious secondary source read in full.
◆ Community	Widely said in the scene; no document proves it.
◆ Vivian's field notes	First-hand experience, not a study.
◆ Unverified	Plausible, not proven yet.

01 In my experience a weaker post from an account the algorithm favours can get many times the views of a careful post from one it ignores.

◆

02 Hours of editing predict nothing: a long intro can flop while a plain picture with one word travels.

◆

03 One post tells you almost nothing, and its first fifteen minutes tell you even less.

◆

04 Look at several posts before you judge an account, and don't take a slow start as a verdict on your talent.

◆

05 Lots of views don’t make a persona someone you can trust.

◆

06 They’re listed here as folklore, so you can recognise them and weigh them yourself.

◆

07 Repeated a lot, never measured.

◆

08 That comes from one creator’s habit, and there’s no published figure.

◆

09 Someone’s guess, never tested.

◆

10 Other creators disagree.

◆

11 A guess with no data behind it.

◆

12 When my reach drops, I check the labels and the settings first, then I look at several posts, then I check whether other creators saw the same drop. If they did, it’s the platform. If only I did, it’s my account.

◆

13 X allows adult nudity and sexual behaviour that was produced consensually, as long as it’s properly labelled and not prominently displayed, as of 2026-11-03.

◆

Adult Content Policy (https://help.x.com/en/rules-and-policies/adult-content)

Archive (https://web.archive.org/web/20261002155114/https://help.x.com/en/rules-and-policies/adult-content)

Accessed 3 November 2026

14 The same rule covers animated and AI-generated content, cartoons, hentai and anime included, so a drawn persona gets no exemption.

◆

Adult Content Policy (https://help.x.com/en/rules-and-policies/adult-content)

Archive (https://web.archive.org/web/20261002155114/https://help.x.com/en/rules-and-policies/adult-content)

Accessed 3 November 2026

15 Adult content isn't allowed in live video, profile pictures, headers, List banners or Community cover photos.

◆

Adult Content Policy (https://help.x.com/en/rules-and-policies/adult-content)

Archive (https://web.archive.org/web/20261002155114/https://help.x.com/en/rules-and-policies/adult-content)

Accessed 3 November 2026

16 The labels are there so that people under 18 don't run into it.

◆

Adult Content Policy (https://help.x.com/en/rules-and-policies/adult-content)

Archive (https://web.archive.org/web/20261002155114/https://help.x.com/en/rules-and-policies/adult-content)

Accessed 3 November 2026

17 You can set your account to mark everything it posts as possibly sensitive.

◆

Your media settings (https://help.x.com/en/rules-and-policies/media-settings)

Archive (https://web.archive.org/web/20261016111110/https://help.x.com/en/rules-and-policies/media-settings)

Accessed 3 November 2026

18 Or you can put a one-time warning on a single photo or video: Nudity, Violence or Sensitive.

◆

Your media settings (https://help.x.com/en/rules-and-policies/media-settings)

Archive (https://web.archive.org/web/20261016111110/https://help.x.com/en/rules-and-policies/media-settings)

Accessed 3 November 2026

19 X also says it may use automated techniques to detect and label sensitive media, so your own marking isn't the only label a post can get.

◆

Your media settings (https://help.x.com/en/rules-and-policies/media-settings)

Archive (https://web.archive.org/web/20261016111110/https://help.x.com/en/rules-and-policies/media-settings)

Accessed 3 November 2026

20 If an account keeps mislabelling its media, X may label it for you, and an offending profile or header image can get you a temporary suspension.

◆

Your media settings (https://help.x.com/en/rules-and-policies/media-settings)

Archive (https://web.archive.org/web/20261016111110/https://help.x.com/en/rules-and-policies/media-settings)

Accessed 3 November 2026

21 X bans content that sexualizes or exposes an identifiable real adult without explicit consent, and the rule names AI-generated and manipulated media.

◆

Non-Consensual Intimate Content policy (page title: Non-consensual nudity policy) (https://help.x.com/en/rules-and-policies/intimate-media)

Archive (https://web.archive.org/web/20261014153519/https://help.x.com/en/rules-and-policies/intimate-media)

Accessed 3 November 2026

22 When I measured it on my own pictures, the triggers were sheer or wet clothing, bodily fluids in a sexual setting and implied arousal, and bare skin alone didn't get a label.

23 Other creators swear by other triggers, like any visible rear, and that stays folklore until X writes it down.

24 A mild image can get labelled, a fresh post can lose its label a few minutes later, and there's nobody to appeal to in the moment.

25 A marked post is expected to get pushed less.

26 An unmarked adult post risks reports, and in the scene a single report has locked an account until an appeal was answered.

27 There's no data on whether either choice changes reach.

28 Platforms close, freeze and restrict accounts, and a restricted account can lose most of its reach for weeks.

29 The scene calls a search suggestion ban an SSB: the account stops showing up in search suggestions.

30 Many creators keep a backup account ready.

31 A backup account is there so you can carry on when a platform closes your account for a reason that isn't a ban on you.

◆

32 Opening a new account to get round a ban breaks platform terms.

◆

33 X doesn't require a real identity on a profile, so a pseudonymous persona is allowed, as of 2026-11-03.

◆

Authenticity (includes the Synthetic and Manipulated Media rules; the old manipulated-media help URL now redirects here) (https://help.x.com/en/rules-and-policies/authenticity)

Archive (https://web.archive.org/web/20261028090009/https://help.x.com/en/rules-and-policies/authenticity)

Accessed 3 November 2026

34 Its fake-persona rule targets made-up identities used to deceive people, so read it before you decide how you present your persona's biography.

◆

Authenticity (includes the Synthetic and Manipulated Media rules; the old manipulated-media help URL now redirects here) (https://help.x.com/en/rules-and-policies/authenticity)

Archive (https://web.archive.org/web/20261028090009/https://help.x.com/en/rules-and-policies/authenticity)

Accessed 3 November 2026

35 A common set-up gives each account one job.

◆

36 Some creators spread a themed evening across accounts, one post an hour for about six hours, and compare how the same kind of content does before they use the main account.

◆

37 Big announcements go where the audience already is, because a new account has almost no audience.

◆

38 Skipping a day or two is fine as long as the next post comes, and forcing output when you're low gets you nowhere.

◆

39 After a quiet stretch, come back with something striking instead of more noise.

◆

40 Post at the hour that suits your audience's evening, whatever your own clock says.

◆

41 Video is an occasional highlight, because a clip costs far more to make than a still.

◆

42 For me, two days without a post is a lapse. It reminds me to make new images and new text. It's never a reason to post something weak.

◆

43 A slow answer to a private message costs you a session, and the pile of replies after a post is one of the biggest time costs of running a persona.

◆

44 Views aren't sends, and a few good subs are worth more than a big audience.

◆

45 Posting is a chore, even for experienced creators, and comparing yourself to the feed makes it worse.

◆

46 Step away from the social accounts for a few days when you're burnt out.

◆

47 If it contradicts itself, or needs a paragraph to explain its visual metaphor, a fresh reader rejects it, so show it to someone outside before you post.

◆

48 An image alone is weak without words, and a picture the audience has already seen is weaker still.

◆

49 Write two or three sentences yourself and let a tool polish them.

◆

50 A clean picture with the name and one call to click reads best.

◆

51 GPS data, provenance records and generation prompts can travel inside a file, and a browser encoder may add a colour profile by itself.

◆

52 The 2DFD editor, made by Vivian, is designed to strip this data, read the file again and refuse the export if anything is left.

◆

53 A teaser and a full version can be exported as a pair, the teaser censored for the public feed, with the same loop length.

◆

54 For a hypno edit, the accessibility guidelines set the limit at three flashes in any one second, unless the flash is below the stated thresholds.

◆

Web Content Accessibility Guidelines (WCAG) 2.2 (https://www.w3.org/TR/WCAG22/)

Archive (https://web.archive.org/web/20261029121709/https://www.w3.org/TR/WCAG22/)

Accessed 3 November 2026

55 Staying under it doesn’t make a loop safe for everyone, so warn first and offer a calm version.

◆

56 The point where the loop restarts counts toward the limit.

◆

57 If it flops, post again, because a flop doesn’t mean the tool is bad, and public updates like v2 and v3 build interest.

◆

58 One image is enough for a familiar kind of tool, and an original one deserves a short video or a page.

◆

59 Don’t link to a site that isn’t ready.

◆

60 A themed month needs a written plan, per day and per account, before it starts.

◆

61 Write the theme, the daily text and the image for each day and each account.

◆

62 Open on a weekend, and add any link that isn’t ready later.

◆

63 At least one post per account, at a different hour on each.

◆

64 One release or one feature a week, never one a day, because each one needs time to spread.

◆

65 Each persona makes a short loop of about ten seconds, and the two are joined into a duo video that both of you post.

66 A reply or a quote from a bigger account can multiply the views of a smaller one, so put the terms of swaps and retweet games in writing.

67 In a collab, you don't use the other dom's private material or lore unless she agrees in writing.

68 Custom emotes and stickers can brand a server.

69 Discord doesn't allow sexually explicit content anywhere that can't be age-restricted, such as avatars, bios, banners, emoji and stickers, as of 2026-11-03.

Discord Community Guidelines (rules 6, 9 and 10) (https://discord.com/guidelines)

Archive (https://web.archive.org/web/20261101163531/https://discord.com/guidelines)

Accessed 3 November 2026

70 Posting is where readers first meet a persona, and some posts are built to push them.

71 Close the app, check your limit, and read The spiral if the wording felt true.

72 It's theatre, and your lunch money is still yours.

73 No prize changes your limit.

74 See Spot a fake dom.

◆

75 Check the destination and read the text before it goes out under your name.

◆

76 A message doesn't oblige you to anything, and you can say no.

◆

77 If you're not sure, don't post it.

◆

78 The rules cover cartoons, hentai, anime and AI-generated content.

◆

Adult Content Policy (https://help.x.com/en/rules-and-policies/adult-content)

Archive (https://web.archive.org/web/20261002155114/https://help.x.com/en/rules-and-policies/adult-content)

Accessed 3 November 2026

79 X lists live video, profile pictures, headers, List banners and Community cover photos.

◆

Adult Content Policy (https://help.x.com/en/rules-and-policies/adult-content)

Archive (https://web.archive.org/web/20261002155114/https://help.x.com/en/rules-and-policies/adult-content)

Accessed 3 November 2026