IN 30 SECONDS

01 A free chat plan is enough to start with captions and advice.

02 A monthly plan suits steady work. Paying per image or per second suits what you make now and then.

03 Video is priced by the second, so the length of your clips makes the bill.

04 A graphics card for local images is a one-time cost, kept apart from the monthly total.

05 Prices change often, and the planner sends nothing anywhere.

YOU WILL LEARN

- ✓ How the planner picks a set of tools for your amount.
- ✓ Which costs are monthly and which depend on how much you make.
- ✓ Which plans stay out of the total, and why.
- ✓ What local images ask of your computer.

PART 01

Plan your month

Pick your amount while you're calm, the way you'd pick any limit. The planner tries every set of options that covers what you ticked and keeps the strongest one that fits your amount. ◆ Prices were read on the providers' own pages on 7 November 2026 and change often. Check the page before you pay. The planner runs in your browser and sends nothing anywhere.

PART 02

How to read it

Each option gets a strength for each need: basic, good or strong. That rating is mine, from using them, not the provider's. When two sets are as strong as each other, the cheaper one wins. It also names the cheapest set that covers the same needs, because you rarely need the strongest one. When nothing fits, the planner shows the cheapest set and how far over your amount it goes. ◆

Images and video can be paid per use. Type how many images or seconds of video you make in a month, and the planner multiplies. One clip of 15 seconds a day is 450 seconds a month, so the per-second price matters more than it looks. ◆

What stays out of the total

The planner counts in US dollars and doesn't convert. ◆ ChatGPT's and Grok's chat plans are shown in each visitor's own currency, so they stay out of the total. ◆ They're real options, just not in the total.

OpenAI's image API is billed by the token, and OpenAI points to a calculator for the cost of one image instead of a fixed price. ◆ So it stays out too.

PART 04

Local images

Local images run on your own computer, so once you have the graphics card they cost nothing a month. ◆ Stability says SDXL works on consumer cards with 8 GB of video memory. ◆ Bigger models ask for more: the fp8 file of Qwen-Image alone is 20.4 GB. ◆

Local video is harder. MiniMax-H3 has open weights for a 33-billion-parameter model. ◆ No memory requirement was found on its page, so the planner leaves local video out. ◆

PART 05

Before you pay

Before the first payment

1. Open the provider's own pricing page and check today's price.
2. Read its rules for adult work, as Pick your AI explains.
3. Pay by the month until you know you'll keep it.
4. Put a spending limit on the card you pay with.

REMEMBER IT

- ♥ Pick your amount first, while you're calm.
- ♥ Free plans cover captions and advice to start.
- ♥ Per-use prices grow with what you make, so count your images and seconds.
- ♥ A graphics card is a one-time cost, outside the monthly total.
- ♥ Check the price on the provider's page before you pay.
