

FOR SUBS • CHAPTER 3

What a persona is

LAST CHECKED 3 NOVEMBER 2026 • 6 MINUTES TO READ

A persona is a character built and kept by someone. Her words are play. Your money, your time and your feelings are real.

EVIDENCE ◆ Verified ◆ Reported ◆ Vivian's field notes ◆ Unverified

This chapter is not advice for your situation.

IN 30 SECONDS

01 A persona is a role. She isn't a friend, an employee or a person you can check.

02 Her hard lines belong in writing, and consent comes before everything else.

03 Nobody knows who's behind her, so every claim about age, gender or place is unverified.

04 Warmth can be honest and can also be what the business runs on.

05 Keep one account fully yours, and watch whether the act is steering your spending.

YOU WILL LEARN

- ✓ What a persona is, and what's real when she plays.
- ✓ What a persona's hard lines look like.
- ✓ Why "who is behind her" has no answer you can check.
- ✓ How warmth gets used as a tool, and how to keep your head.
- ✓ What a creator should keep apart from the persona.

> I'm a character. Someone drew me, wrote my voice and keeps my rules. Once you know that, everything else about me is easier to read.
>
> — VIVIAN

PART 01

A persona is a character

A persona is a character, built by someone and kept by someone. She isn't an employee or a friend, and her limits are part of the character. The dominance she shows in public is performed, and the person behind her may be quite different in private. ◆

Research describes findom as a range that runs from a lifestyle choice to purely commercial work, and some findommes treat it as work. ◆ That fits a persona well: the character is the product, and a product is made to be liked.

MYTH	FACT
~~She's my friend, so she wouldn't take more than I can afford.~~	A friend's income doesn't depend on your next send. A persona's does, however sincere she feels. ◆
MYTH	FACT
~~It's only a character, so none of it counts.~~	The sub's money, time and feelings are real. ◆
MYTH	FACT
~~She says she's nothing like the money-only doms, so she's safe.~~	Calling herself relationship-first is also a marketing line, and nobody can check it. ◆

What's real when a persona plays

	Status	What it means for you
The character's life and feelings	Written, like a role	Fiction, even when it feels personal
Her warmth in a session	Performed, and can also be honest	Enjoy it, and watch what she asks for with it
Your money	Real	Gone when you send it
Your time and attention	Real	They count as much as the money
Your feelings	Real	A normal result of the format
Consent and limits	Real	The only thing that keeps it a game

Strong feelings in a session are a normal effect of the format, and they don't prove a relationship. One study reports a participant saying the attention, more than the gifts, is what's addictive. The press reports a former participant saying some subs mainly wanted to talk to women. Both fit what I've seen: the attention is a big part of what the sub chooses to spend on.

PART 02

The hard lines of a persona

Limits belong in the persona file, and not only in someone's head. ◆ One example reads: the persona never meets anyone, appears on camera or uses a voice. Nothing in her looks or setting is child-like, whatever the story says. She doesn't chase, and she never crosses a sub's real limits. That's one example, and it isn't a model for every dom.

V

VIVIAN'S FIELD NOTES

Consent comes first. A persona teases and doesn't hurt, and anything made in her name, an app or a game, has to respect that. A task announced with no choice can still be negotiated, and counter-offers are normal. ◆ A dom doesn't have to play a game she dislikes to spare feelings, and she doesn't owe a paying sub every request.

◆

Hard lines

Why write limits down

Because a limit kept in your head can’t be held against anyone.

Can a task be negotiated

Yes. A counter-offer is a normal part of consent in the scene.

Does a payment buy a request

No. A dom may refuse content she won’t play.

You can’t check who runs a drawn character. Age, gender, place and experience are all claims, and each one is unverified. It’s often said that many personas are run by men, though there’s no official number. A survey of 56 findommes counted a majority of cisgender women among its respondents, and its authors say male dominants are underrepresented in the sample. A sample that small can’t tell you who runs a drawn character.

V

VIVIAN’S FIELD NOTES

I say what I am: a drawn character. A persona who claims a real body, a real city and a real age, with no way to check any of it, is asking for trust she hasn’t earned. Her story may be a good one. Treat it as a story.

Warmth as a tool

Care between demands is real, and harshness belongs inside the scene while kindness belongs outside it. Kindness outside a scene can also be what keeps you paying, so notice whether it rises with the amount. Warmth can be honest and also be what the business runs on. The test is whether the act is steering the spending. ◆

Warmth used as a lever

WHAT THEY SAY OR DO

01 "I want my subs to fall in love", then an offer to own you when you say you're in love

THE COUNTER

A feeling turned into a hook. Strong feelings are a normal effect of the format.

WHAT THEY SAY OR DO

02 Rescue offered ("come to me if it gets bad"), then warmth withdrawn when you say you're fine

THE COUNTER

This teaches you that being independent costs you affection. Look for warmth that doesn't depend on doing what she says, and notice an apology that only brings the attention back.

WHAT THEY SAY OR DO

03 Possessive lines such as "if you ever leave I quit"

THE COUNTER

Between two people playing, they're a trope. Aimed at a paying sub, they make leaving feel harmful. Leaving is your free choice, and keeping her motivated is never your job.

WHAT THEY SAY OR DO

04 Tasks described openly as conditioning to increase attachment

THE COUNTER

Dependence is the first step of the spiral. Check your limits.

WHAT THEY SAY OR DO

05 A flood of importance and attention on first contact, called love bombing

THE COUNTER

Ask what's wanted, and slow down.

Welcoming romantic attachment from a paying sub feeds a one-sided bond. ◆

TRY IT

You feel like you're buying affection

You tell a persona that the money and the feelings have blurred, and that you want to stop. She answers.

A "Affection cannot be bought. My warmth is the same at any amount. I accept your decision."

The right answer. That's an honest answer. It leaves the decision with you, and it asks for nothing.

B "If you leave, I have nobody. Please stay."

Not this one. This makes you responsible for her feelings.

C "Then prove it was real and send one more time."

Not this one. A send is a gift, and it proves nothing.

PART 04

What not to share

RED FLAGS

Giving access

- You hand over a login as proof of trust.
- You let her read your private conversations with others.
- A chat stays open on a shared or unlocked computer.

Counter. Keep at least one account fully yours. If she asks for proof, show only a send confirmation with names, balance and numbers hidden. Never show a login or an export of private chats. Change any password you shared. Lock the screen or close the chat.

A sub who gives a persona access to everything has no private space left, and in my experience he acts differently when he knows he's being watched. A login typed into a chat breaks your security and your anonymity at once, because anyone who can read the chat or the mailbox can use it. ◆ See Choosing a dom.

PART 05

Kinds of persona, and running one

Kinds of persona

◆	What she asks	What to do
Pure roleplay	Nothing financial	Ask early, because some personas expect nothing
Financial	Tributes and sends	Set a limit first
Soft or caring	Attention, sometimes sends	Comfort is part of what holds people, so keep your limit
Presents as pure dom	May be a switch, with a sub side kept elsewhere	Her stated role may differ from the person

The tone can be harsh, with degrading nicknames used as scripted play, and the same dom can switch to soft pet names within minutes. Decide beforehand which words you accept. ◆

For people who run a persona. The character protects you, and it has costs. Keep persona work on a separate profile, and decide which account a mentor or peer can see. A mentor with access to your main account can expose your subs. A persona stays composed with subs, but personal pain goes to close friends, because a one-way relationship is tiring. ◆ Findom has no closing time, and burnout is real, so read Ending well.

PART 06

Keeping your head

Notice the loop early

1. After a send, name what you feel: relief, regret, shame.
2. Listen for the sentence “better this dom than a stranger”.
3. If you want to send less, count the weeks since your last send.
4. Tell one person you trust, and do it soon.
5. If you can’t stop, go to The spiral and Where to get help.

Regret that comes with a reason to keep going is an early sign that spending is turning compulsive, and no reason to feel safe. ◆ A blog post compares some cases to problem gambling. ◆

TRY IT

Check yourself

QUESTION 1 OF 3

Who is behind a drawn persona?

- ◯ Always a woman who looks like her
- ◯ Unknown, and every claim about it is unverified
- ◯ Someone you can find with an image search

Answer. Unknown, and every claim about it is unverified. The character is a role, and her life story is part of it.

QUESTION 2 OF 3

A persona answers “I love you” with an offer to own you. What is that?

- ◯ Proof of a relationship
- ◯ A feeling turned into a hook
- ◯ A rule of the scene

Answer. A feeling turned into a hook. Strong feelings are normal in the format. Welcoming them while being paid is using them to make money.

QUESTION 3 OF 3

Which account do you keep fully yours?

- ◯ At least one, never shared
- ◯ None, since she asked
- ◯ The one with the least in it

Answer. At least one, never shared. Shared access leaves you no private space and no safe way out.

Free, confidential helplines exist in most countries.

Find a helpline →

REMEMBER IT

- ♥ A persona is a role, and your money and feelings are real.
- ♥ Hard lines are written down, and consent comes first.
- ♥ You can’t check who’s behind her.
- ♥ Warmth can be honest and can also steer spending.
- ♥ Keep one account fully yours.

SOURCES AND EVIDENCE

Check it

Every claim with its evidence level and its sources.

01 A persona is a character, built by someone and kept by someone.

◆

02 She isn't an employee or a friend, and her limits are part of the character.

◆

03 The dominance she shows in public is performed, and the person behind her may be quite different in private.

◆

04 Research describes findom as a range that runs from a lifestyle choice to purely commercial work, and some findommes treat it as work.

◆

Findommes, Cybermediated Sex Work, and Rinsing (McCracken and Brooks-Gordon, Sexuality Research and Social Policy 18(4), 837-854, DOI 10.1007/s13178-021-00609-3) (https://www.ebi.ac.uk/europepmc/webservices/rest/PMC8418458/fullTextXML)

Archive (http://web.archive.org/web/20261016030740/https://pmc.ncbi.nlm.nih.gov/articles/PMC8418458/)

Accessed 3 November 2026

05 A persona's does, however sincere she feels.

◆

06 The sub's money, time and feelings are real.

◆

07 Calling herself relationship-first is also a marketing line, and nobody can check it.

◆

08 Strong feelings in a session are a normal effect of the format, and they don't prove a relationship.

◆

09 One study reports a participant saying the attention, more than the gifts, is what's addictive.

◆

Findommes, Cybermediated Sex Work, and Rinsing (McCracken and Brooks-Gordon, Sexuality Research and Social Policy 18(4), 837-854, DOI 10.1007/s13178-021-00609-3) (https://www.ebi.ac.uk/europepmc/webservices/rest/PMC8418458/fullTextXML)

Archive (http://web.archive.org/web/20261016030740/https://pmc.ncbi.nlm.nih.gov/articles/PMC8418458/)

Accessed 3 November 2026

10 The press reports a former participant saying some subs mainly wanted to talk to women.

◆

[a former participant] has seen men left broke and hungry from 'paying women to talk to them' (https://www.sbs.com.au/news/the-feed/article/the-online-kink-thats-leaving-some-men-homeless-bankrupt-and-normalising-suffering/vocm5xt30)

Archive (http://web.archive.org/web/20251123124217/https://www.sbs.com.au/news/the-feed/article/the-online-kink-thats-leaving-some-men-homeless-bankrupt-and-normalising-suffering/vocm5xt30)

Accessed 3 November 2026

11 Both fit what I've seen: the attention is a big part of what the sub chooses to spend on.

◆

12 Limits belong in the persona file, and not only in someone's head.

◆

13 A persona teases and doesn't hurt, and anything made in her name, an app or a game, has to respect that.

◆

14 A task announced with no choice can still be negotiated, and counter-offers are normal.

◆

15 A dom doesn't have to play a game she dislikes to spare feelings, and she doesn't owe a paying sub every request.

◆

16 Because a limit kept in your head can't be held against anyone.

◆

17 A counter-offer is a normal part of consent in the scene.

◆

18 A dom may refuse content she won't play.

◆

19 You can't check who runs a drawn character.

◆

20 Age, gender, place and experience are all claims, and each one is unverified.

◆

21 It's often said that many personas are run by men, though there's no official number.

◆

22 A survey of 56 findommes counted a majority of cisgender women among its respondents, and its authors say male dominants are underrepresented in the sample.

◆

Findommes, Cybermediated Sex Work, and Rinsing (McCracken and Brooks-Gordon, Sexuality Research and Social Policy 18(4), 837-854, DOI 10.1007/s13178-021-00609-3) (https://www.ebi.ac.uk/europepmc/webservices/rest/PMC8418458/fullTextXML)

Archive (http://web.archive.org/web/20261016030740/https://pmc.ncbi.nlm.nih.gov/articles/PMC8418458/)

Accessed 3 November 2026

23 I say what I am: a drawn character. A persona who claims a real body, a real city and a real age, with no way to check any of it, is asking for trust she hasn't earned. Her story may be a good one. Treat it as a story.

◆

24 Care between demands is real, and harshness belongs inside the scene while kindness belongs outside it.

◆

25 Kindness outside a scene can also be what keeps you paying, so notice whether it rises with the amount.

◆

26 Warmth can be honest and also be what the business runs on.

◆

27 The test is whether the act is steering the spending.

◆

28 Welcoming romantic attachment from a paying sub feeds a one-sided bond.

◆

29 A sub who gives a persona access to everything has no private space left, and in my experience he acts differently when he knows he's being watched.

◆

30 A login typed into a chat breaks your security and your anonymity at once, because anyone who can read the chat or the mailbox can use it.

◆

31 The tone can be harsh, with degrading nicknames used as scripted play, and the same dom can switch to soft pet names within minutes.

◆

32 Decide beforehand which words you accept.

33 The character protects you, and it has costs.

34 Keep persona work on a separate profile, and decide which account a mentor or peer can see.

35 A mentor with access to your main account can expose your subs.

36 A persona stays composed with subs, but personal pain goes to close friends, because a one-way relationship is tiring.

37 Regret that comes with a reason to keep going is an early sign that spending is turning compulsive, and no reason to feel safe.

38 A blog post compares some cases to problem gambling.

The Psychology of Financial Dominatrixes (blog post) (https://www.psychologytoday.com/us/blog/in-excess/201612/the-psychology-financial-dominatrixes)

Accessed 3 November 2026

Free, confidential helplines exist in most countries.

Find a helpline →

Nothing here is financial, legal or medical advice for your situation.