

Safety • Chapter 4

If you already sent

Last checked 3 November 2026 • 5 minutes to read

You sent money and you wish you had not. This page gives the first steps, what to avoid, what to do if you shared access, and what to expect from a decent dom.

Verified | Reported | Vivian's field notes | Unverified

This chapter is not advice for your situation.

In 30 seconds

- One send is not the end of anything. The next hour matters more than the send.
- Stop, keep everything, wait a day, and tell one person you trust.
- Never hand over a password, a login code or control of a device to prove anything.
- Do not send again to get a send back. Nobody can promise you a refund.
- If rent, food or bills are at risk, stop and ask for independent help.

You will learn

- The four steps to take after a send you regret.
- Why hiding it and deleting the chat make things worse.
- What to do if you gave a password, a code or remote control.
- What can and cannot be expected about getting money back.
- What a decent dom does when you say stop.

One send is not the end of anything. I say that first because the hour after a send is when people decide to hide it, and hiding is what turns one send into a habit. Read this slowly. You do not have to feel better before you act.

— Vivian

The first hour

You have sent money, and you wish you had not. This is common, and what you do next matters more than the send itself. A familiar cycle runs from the wish to pay, to the send, to heavy guilt, to hiding it, and then to a repeat when things feel good again. ◑ The guilt is real. Acting on it by hiding is the step that keeps the cycle turning. See The spiral.

If you already sent

1. Stop sending, even to “unlock a refund”.
2. Keep the messages and the payment receipts.
3. Report the account on the platform where you met.
4. Tell someone you trust what happened.

Step three is for an account you think may be fake. If you simply regret a send to a real dom, skip it and keep the other three. To check whether an account is fake, read Spot a fake dom.

Wait one day. Some people feel low after a send, and a low is a bad moment to decide anything about money, the dom or the account. ◑ Make no new decision until you have slept and eaten.

Tell one person. Hiding the send adds a second problem on top of the first, and telling a person you trust soon after the first send is better than waiting. ◑ One blog post on findom names hiding the spending from a partner as a risk factor. ◎ Reported You do not need to give a full account. One sentence is enough: I sent money I should not have, and I want to stop. ◑ Choose someone near you who does not earn from your spending.

What not to do

Myth

Deleting the whole conversation will help me move on.

Fact

Deleting the chat feeds the loop and removes what you may need for a report or for help. Deleting the account on the sending platform often does not hold either, because other accounts and other paid forms of the same play remain.

Myth

One last send will get my money back.

Fact

A send made to fix a send is the same send again. A refund offered after another payment, often called processing or insurance, is how a fake account keeps going.

Myth

It is better to give to this dom than to a stranger.

Fact

That sentence is how the next send gets permission. It is a rationalisation, and you can leave it out.

Myth

I should prove I am sincere by handing over access.

Fact

Sincerity is never shown with a password or a code. A dom who is real needs no proof from you. If she asks to see a send, only a confirmation with names, balance and numbers hidden is safe to show.

Myth

I owe what she says I owe.

Fact

A round figure declared owed after one session is a framing. Inside the game, nothing creates a debt you did not agree to beforehand.

If you need to cut contact, muting or blocking is your choice. Keep the messages first. A break that holds removes the means, covers the substitutes and involves someone who is told the truth. Set a cap with a reset day and keep bank confirmations on. See Breaks that hold.

If you gave access or a code

A request for your password, for a login code sent to your phone, or for control of your device is how an account is taken over. Security guidance from a government agency and from a remote-access vendor says not to give control of a device to a stranger or to anyone you do not know or trust. Verified

Secure what you shared

1. Change the password of the account you shared, and of any other account that used the same password. Do it from your own device, never from a link you were sent.
2. Sign out of all other sessions and devices in the account's security settings, then turn on two-step login.
3. If you gave a login code, treat the account as already open to someone else until you have checked it.
4. Remove saved payment methods from that account. If someone controlled your computer, remove the remote tool and do not use the device for banking until it is checked.
5. If a card or account number was shared, tell your bank and ask what it can do.
6. Report the request to the platform where you met.

Money

Whether a send can come back depends on how it was made, on the platform and on the country. No public rule for tributes could be found for this wiki as of 2026-11-03. Unverified Do not count on a refund. A tribute is a gift, and in practice they are not returned because the sender changed his mind.

Do not pay anyone who promises to get your money back. A rescue offered by the account that took the money, such as a recovery fee, is a trap. What you can do is ask your bank or the payment platform, calmly and soon, what options exist and how long you have.

If you cannot cover rent, food or bills, stop sending, tell someone, and look for independent debt advice, never from the person who was paid. One press article quotes a former participant who says he had seen men sell cars, go into debt and take out second jobs. Reported Where to find help is in Where to get help.

What a decent dom does when you say stop

Vivian's field notes

When someone tells a dom he regrets a send, the answer is to tell him to stop, to say plainly what was taken, to ask how he is and to ask for nothing more. You can expect that from a decent dom. If the answer to your regret is another offer, she is answering to her income, and you have learned what you needed to know.

A plain goodbye is the model. One that leaves the door open can also work as a soft hook. Wait before you answer it.

If the money and the feelings have blurred and you feel you are buying affection, remember that affection cannot be bought. What you chose to spend on is the play and the attention, and a gift buys no promise, rank or reply. A decent dom is as warm at a small amount as at a large one.

When someone presses you after a send

What they say or do

1 Confess everything by tonight or it gets worse

The counter

Ask for a pause. A deadline that removes your choice is pressure, whoever sets it.

What they say or do

2 Write down when, why and how much, in full

The counter

Say only what you choose to say. A forced written account is not an honest conversation.

What they say or do

3 Hand over your accounts and delete nothing

The counter

Never hand over access. See above.

What they say or do

4 Answer now or all contact ends

The counter

Ask for the talk to wait until both of you are rested and sober, and bring in a person you trust.

A tired or drinking person cannot answer or hear properly, so hard talks wait. A partner who finds out deserves a calm talk.

The morning after

You sent money last night and you regret it. This morning the dom writes: “Good morning. Did you sleep? I have something new for you today.”

A Reply at once and take the offer, to make last night feel worth it

Not this one. A new send does not cancel the last one. It repeats it.

B Delete the whole conversation and the account

Not this one. Deleting feeds the loop and removes what you may need. Muting or blocking is your call, but keep the messages.

C Say once that you are stopping, send nothing, and tell one person you trust

The right answer. Right. A decent dom accepts a stop without an ask. If she answers with another offer, you have your answer.

Remember it

1. One send is not the end of anything. The next hour matters more.
2. Stop, keep everything, wait a day, and tell one person.
3. Never hand over a password, a code or control of a device.
4. A refund offered after another payment is a trap.
5. If rent, food or bills are at risk, get independent help.

Free, confidential helplines exist in most countries.

Find a helpline →

Check it

Every claim with its evidence level and its sources.

1 This is common, and what you do next matters more than the send itself.

Vivian's field notes

2 A familiar cycle runs from the wish to pay, to the send, to heavy guilt, to hiding it, and then to a repeat when things feel good again.

Vivian's field notes

3 Some people feel low after a send, and a low is a bad moment to decide anything about money, the dom or the account.

Vivian's field notes

4 Hiding the send adds a second problem on top of the first, and telling a person you trust soon after the first send is better than waiting.

Vivian's field notes

5 One blog post on findom names hiding the spending from a partner as a risk factor.

Reported

The Psychology of Financial Dominatrixes (blog post) (https://www.psychologytoday.com/us/blog/in-excess/201612/the-psychology-financial-dominatrixes)

Accessed 3 November 2026

6 One sentence is enough: I sent money I should not have, and I want to stop.

Vivian's field notes

7 Deleting the account on the sending platform often does not hold either, because other accounts and other paid forms of the same play remain.

Vivian's field notes

8 A refund offered after another payment, often called processing or insurance, is how a fake account keeps going.

Vivian's field notes

9 It is a rationalisation, and you can leave it out.

Vivian's field notes

10 If she asks to see a send, only a confirmation with names, balance and numbers hidden is safe to show.

Vivian's field notes

11 Inside the game, nothing creates a debt you did not agree to beforehand.

Vivian's field notes

12 A break that holds removes the means, covers the substitutes and involves someone who is told the truth.

Vivian's field notes

13 A request for your password, for a login code sent to your phone, or for control of your device is how an account is taken over.

Vivian's field notes

14 Security guidance from a government agency and from a remote-access vendor says not to give control of a device to a stranger or to anyone you do not know or trust.

Verified

IC3 Issues Alert on Tech Support Fraud (https://www.cisa.gov/news-events/alerts/2018/03/29/ic3-issues-alert-tech-support-fraud)

Archive (http://web.archive.org/web/20250716102123/https://www.cisa.gov/news-events/alerts/2018/03/29/ic3-issues-alert-tech-support-fraud)

Accessed 3 November 2026

TeamViewer and scamming (https://www.teamviewer.com/en/global/support/knowledge-base/teamviewer-remote/security/teamviewer-and-scamming/)

Archive (http://web.archive.org/web/20260519191922/https://www.teamviewer.com/en/global/support/knowledge-base/teamviewer-remote/security/teamviewer-and-scamming/)

Accessed 3 November 2026

15 No public rule for tributes could be found for this wiki as of 2026-11-03.

Unverified

16 Do not count on a refund.

Vivian's field notes

17 A tribute is a gift, and in practice they are not returned because the sender changed his mind.

Vivian's field notes

18 A rescue offered by the account that took the money, such as a recovery fee, is a trap.

Vivian's field notes

19 If you cannot cover rent, food or bills, stop sending, tell someone, and look for independent debt advice, never from the person who was paid.

Vivian's field notes

20 One press article quotes a former participant who says he had seen men sell cars, go into debt and take out second jobs.

Reported

[a former participant] has seen men left broke and hungry from 'paying women to talk to them' (https://www.sbs.com.au/news/the-feed/article/the-online-kink-thats-leaving-some-men-homeless-bankrupt-and-normalising-suffering/vocm5xt30)

Archive (http://web.archive.org/web/20251123124217/https://www.sbs.com.au/news/the-feed/article/the-online-kink-thats-leaving-some-men-homeless-bankrupt-and-normalising-suffering/vocm5xt30)

Accessed 3 November 2026

21 When someone tells a dom he regrets a send, the answer is to tell him to stop, to say plainly what was taken, to ask how he is and to ask for nothing more. You can expect that from a decent dom. If the answer to your regret is another offer, she is answering to her income, and you have learned what you needed to know.

Vivian's field notes

22 One that leaves the door open can also work as a soft hook.

Vivian's field notes

23 If the money and the feelings have blurred and you feel you are buying affection, remember that affection cannot be bought.

Vivian's field notes

24 What you chose to spend on is the play and the attention, and a gift buys no promise, rank or reply.

Vivian's field notes

25 A decent dom is as warm at a small amount as at a large one.

Vivian's field notes

Free, confidential helplines exist in most countries.

Find a helpline →

Nothing here is financial, legal or medical advice for your situation.